

Cantilever Racking

Cantilever Racking is used predominately to store products that are too long or wide to fit into a conventional storage system. The system is devised by using columns and arms (which the product sits on) so giving easy access to all products. Any handling equipment can be used to operate this system.